

2003 World Cruise

CRYSTAL SYMPHONY

WONDERS OF THE SOUTHERN SEAS

Wednesday, January 29, 2003

Greetings Antarctica and Australia Adventurers,

While Jonathan Winters reminisced of the past last evening, the President of the U.S. talked of the future. How fortuitous that the timing of both events was such that you could see and hear both if you so wished.

I've had an inquiry about the dress for tomorrow night's dinner. The dress of the evening is Casual. While we have an elegant evening planned for you, the dress code of the evening will not detract from this. Casual dress nights are often looked forward to, so most important to us is that you dress comfortably and that you enjoy the party.

You can find me every sea day in the Palm Court from 10:30am to 11:30am for an informal "getting acquainted" hour. I've so enjoyed chatting with those of you who have already visited. Additionally, this hour provides you with a set time where you can find me every day at sea.

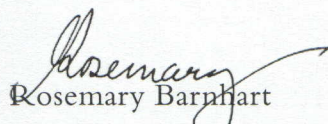

To those of you who have not attended one of Barbara Rinella's book dramatizations, I would recommend her presentation tomorrow. The topic is "Hidden Power; Presidential Marriages That Shaped Our Recent History." She talks of the Wilsons, FDR and Eleanor, the Trumans, Eisenhowers, Kennendys and on up until today with the unfolding story of Laura and George W. The presentation will be in the Starlite Club, Deck 6 Aft at 11:00am.

Before signing off.....

Define and locate more of the following famous "lines."

- a) The Line of Demarcation.
- b) The Short Line
- c) The Morning Line

Wishing you a restful and peaceful night,

Rosemary Barnhart
2003 World Cruise Hostess

Answers to the last newsletter, 28 Jan., 2003:

Define and locate the following famous lines:

- a) The Dew Line:

Distant Early Warning acronym;

a line of radar stations in the Arctic for detecting a Soviet attack.

- b) The Mason-Dixon Line:

The Pennsylvania/Maryland border surveyed by Mason and Dixon in 1767; the unofficial line between the "North" and "South".

- c) The Long Grey Line:

The cadets on parade at West Point.