United States Public Health Advisory

Below can be cooked to order and may be raw or undercooked

EGGS • SALMON • BURGERS • STEAK

Consuming raw or undercooked eggs, salmon, burgers or steak may increase your risk for foodborne illness, especially if you have certain medical conditions.

The USPH most recent guidelines require us to advise you that any foods such as meat, seafood (salmon), shellfish, eggs or poultry that you may consume raw or which you might order not thoroughly cooked to the required minimum temperature (to eliminate disease-causing organisms) can significantly increase risk for foodborne illness, especially if you have certain medical conditions.
