The shrine was originally founded in Zaimokuza in 1063 by Minamoto Yoriyoshi to be dedicated to Hachiman, the guardian deity of the Genji (Minamoto) clan. In 1180, the descendant Minamoto Yoritomo moved the shrine to its present site. In 1191, he set the shrine as the center of the Kamakura Shogunate (Government of Kamakura), and also modeled it into the present arrangement-the Jogu shrine on the top of the stone steps and the Wakamiya Shrine at the bottom of it.

The Daibutsu at Kotokuin is known as Kamakura Daibutsu. The height is 11.31 meters (13.35 meters including the base) and the weight is about 121 tons. The construction of the bronze statue of Buddha as it appears today dates from 1252. Kamakura Daibutsu is the only statue of Buddha in Kamakura that is designated as a national treasure. The whole statue was gilded and placed inside of Daibutsu-den or the great Buddha hall when it was completed. It is now an outdoor Daibutsu because the Daibutsu-den building was destroyed by earthquakes and tsunamis.

Tips for Shrines and Temples

Shrine

Shrines in the Shinto religion are institutions where deities are enshrined. In Japan, people believe in the existence of a very large number of deities. Way of Praying

In front of the torii gate, which is the entrance of a shrine, bow one time towards the main hall. Passing through the torii, walk along one side or the other side of the approach, not in the center.  $\rightarrow$  Purify yourself at the water pavilion called chozuya or temizuya. (Purify your hands and mouth with water. Don't let the ladle touch your mouth!)  $\rightarrow$  Slightly bow, ring the bell, toss money into the money box, and pray in the Shinto bowing and clapping style (Nirei Nihakushu Ichirei). Bow slightly and leave. When leaving the precincts, make one bow towards the main hall and the torii.

water, and put the water in your left hand. 6. Wash your mouth with the water in your left hand. 7. After vashing your left hand, place the ladle upright and rinse it with water. 8. Put the ladle back in its place.

Buddhist Temple Buddhist temples are religious institutions of Buddhism. Most temples enshrines a Buddhist statue or statues in their main hall.

Way of Praying

In front of the sanmon gate, which is the entrance to the temple, join your palms together and bow to the main hall.  $\rightarrow$  Silently pray in front of the main hall, without clapping.  $\rightarrow$  You may go and look inside the temple if allowed and if you are interested.  $\rightarrow$  When leaving, join your palms together and bow to the main hall.

Rules and Manners of Japan

Walking on the street

- When walking on a busy street, be careful not to block the path. - Try not to make too much noise because most areas around shrines and temples are residential areas. - Don't leave any waste or garbage in the precincts -please bring it home with you.

- It is not allowed to walk in possession of a knife or other such dangerous

- When taking a picture of someone, please obtain permission first.

In the restroom

- Please use the toilets marked as 🚻 🔄 🖳 on the map (backside). Please avoid entering temples and restaurants only for using the toilet. - After usage, please flush the toilet.

Traveling by bus

- At the bus stop, line up and respect the order of the line. - When on the bus, if you are noisy you won't hear the bus driver announcing information. Try not to make too much noise on the bus.

Visiting temples and shrines

- Inside the temple, stay quiet. - As a rule, do not smoke

- To take a picture of a Buddhist statue, you must obtain permission first. Be careful not to damage any plants.

When entering the main hall for zazen meditation and praying, shorts and sportswear are not allowed.
